ed by the flowers that bloom in the spring that not a word had escaped their lips during the time the father drew checks with the ease and grace of a Vanderbilt, saying, as he tendered the same, "Bless you, my children."

Of course, in the cherry finale, all the lovers gained their sweet hearts, and the scene was a hilarious and happy one, enhanced by the entrance of Miss Weatherers, who was acting the part of "Biddy" to the queen's taste, while her lover—Stoman Moody—as "Hans," the chip of the establishment, was with her to seek the consent of their lord to their matrimonial venture.

Misses May Allred and Lillie Frost were also in the cast, and the verdict of the audience was that in the presentation of the comedy nothing was wanting on the part of the actors to round it out to a perfect success.

The duet of Misses Johnnie Liddon and Pearl Pearson, in "Hear me, Norma," sung in character, was grandly done, and that part of the scene where the imperial Pearl's heart is softened by the soulful pleading of Johnnie's touching notes, and which cause her to cast the glittering dagger from her hand and sink into each other's embrace, was heightened by the childish glee of little Clarence Zawadski and Elizabeth Newsom, who joined in the reconciliation of the older couple, around whom, in the innocence and gladness of their pure, unselfish hearts, they clasped their arms.

This scene was pure art, augmented by a dramatic realization that sent a thrill of joy through the audience.

The recitation to music by Miss Irma Porter, entitled "The Taking of Saragossa in 1810," was splendidly spoken.

"The Train to Mauro," by Miss Meta Jewett, Guy Zawadski and Frank Ditto, added another chapter of laughter to the evening, which in no wise lessened the genial flow of amusement by the "Lesson in French," which Miss Lena Bullock and Prof. Reid so captivantly rendered in song.

Messrs. Dale, Cullen, Nash and Albert Gerig sang so effectively the taking song of "Where are You Going, My Pretty Maid," that nothing short of an encore would appease the demand for more, and "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" was given and all took it with intense relish.

The operetta, "Bobby Shaftoe," followed, but Prof. Reid, for a reason not made known, was substituted for Mr. Moody, and was assisted by Miss Liddon and Miss Gray.

It was well rendered and Miss Liddon, who had the leading part, acted and sang to perfection.

"The Long Lost Nephew" was so ludicrous and so admirably presented that it was a fitting finale to an evening of rare enjoyment. The interest centers around Mr. Calomus—George McKean—and his long lost nephew, which was none other than our indispensable Ed Helvenston, who falls in love with Mr. Calomus' lovely niece—Miss Lillias Allred—which is reciprocated, while Calomus mistakes his housemaid's lover—Carlos Sistrunk, who finally wins Miss Jewett—for his own nephew, who has been in India, and whom he has not seen in twenty years, yet whom he desires to marry his niece—Miss Allred. But, as "true love never did run smooth" to start with, the situations are a series of surprises of the most unlooked-for kind, that started a rill of merriment and laughter that fairly rippled through the play to the finish.

All the characters in this farce did splendidly, crowned themselves with glory enough for a one night stand. Mr. Helvenston captured several extra bouquets and great applause when he said if there was anything new on the courting line (as the old methods had failed him), he would like to know it and adopt it, and he appealed to his friend, George Ford, whom it appeared had filed several caveats on a dead sure thing in love courts, and "Ed" was just dying to get them.

But we must halt by saying that Mrs. E. L. Carney and Prof. Pike supplied the instrumental music.

It was an evening we shall long pleasantly remember.
